CHEF'S CORNER: DID YOU KNOW??

With the cooler weather upon us, we think of those comfort foods that warm us up on a chilly evening. One of the most common comfort foods we have is the faithful bread pudding, but do you really know where it originated?

Bread Pudding is one of the oldest desserts that we still consume today. Originally created to use up leftover bread (especially amongst the less wealthy), its origins can be traced back to ancient Egypt where they made a dish using leftover bread, cream, almonds, and dates called "OM ALI."

It wasn't until the Middle Ages, when custard was invented, that bread pudding took on more of the look we're accustomed to today. During this time, the popular dish, which was mostly consumed among the peasants, moved itself into the kitchens and dining rooms of the wealthy and royalty where various toppings of caramel and cream were then added.

So this winter season, light up the fire, turn up the Christmas music, sit back and indulge in a hearty bowl of bread pudding with your loved ones.
